Going beyond 'ABC' in insurance with companies moving to digital and beginning to look at using distributed ledger technology that could potentially expose their businesses to all sorts of cyber threats and vulnerability to distributed denial of service attacks (DDoS), what can the insurance industry do to help protect businesses and consumers?

Meanwhile, data breaches, phishing attempts and ransomware attacks are ramping up. What are the risks and opportunities in underwriting such risks even with powerful encryption of data in today's cyber risk environment? Is there a whole new world of opportunities out there?
